Introduction

Parole is the release of a prisoner after they have completed part of their prison sentence. Most prisoners will be eligible for release on parole at some point during their term of imprisonment but not all prisoners can or will be released on parole. Parole eligibility dates and the rules regarding parole depend on what type of sentence the prisoner has received and other factors.

The Prisoner’s Review Board (‘the Board’) is the main authority in Western Australia to grant, defer or refuse parole and takes into account factors affecting the offender, victims of crime and the safety of the community.

The Sentence Administration Act 2003 (WA) (‘the Act’) is the main source of law for parole in Western Australia and governs the Prisoner’s Review Board.

The aim of this kit is to provide information on:

- parole generally;
- eligibility for parole; and
- the Prisoners Review Board process.

It is designed to help prisoners:

- who are eligible for parole, to apply for parole;
- to seek a review of a decision regarding parole; and/or
- to re-apply for parole.

Who should read this kit

- Prisoners who have been sentenced to 6 months or more imprisonment and have been given a parole eligibility order by the court.
- Prisoners eligible to be considered for parole at a date set by a court including life sentences.
- Prisoners who have been denied parole, including life-sentence prisoners.
- Prisoners who have had their parole suspended or cancelled.

When are you eligible for parole?

Prisoners serving 6 months or more

Sections 19 and 20 of the Act:

- A court may order that a prisoner serving 6 months or more be eligible for parole.
- The date for parole eligibility is determined by the term of imprisonment imposed. If the term is:
  - 4 years or less – when the prisoner has served one-half of the term; or
  - More than 4 years – when the prisoner has served 2 years less than the term. For example, if the sentence is 7 years 6 months imprisonment, the prisoner will be eligible for parole at 5 years 6 months.
- The Board must consider the prisoner for parole before the eligibility date, however, the prisoner cannot be released on parole before the eligibility date.
- A prisoner cannot be released on parole on their eligibility date if they are sentenced to another finite sentence on other charges that continues past their original eligibility date.
- A prisoner cannot be released on parole if they are remanded in custody on other charges.
- A prisoner who is subject to deportation, removal or extradition is not released into the community after serving the non-parole part of their sentence but is released into the custody of the appropriate officer for deportation, removal or extradition.

Prisoners sentenced to life imprisonment

Section 25 of the Act states:

- The Board cannot parole these prisoners. Only the Governor can determine the release of prisoners serving life imprisonment.
- Prisoners sentenced to life imprisonment for an offence other than murder:
  - are first eligible for release on parole 7 years after the day on which the sentence began;
  - if not released on parole, will then be considered for parole every 3 years after that.
- Prisoners sentenced to life imprisonment for an offence of murder, where the court orders parole eligibility:
  - are eligible for parole at the end of the minimum period stated by the sentencing court. For example, life imprisonment with a minimum of 17 years to be served;
  - if not paroled at the first eligible date, will be re-considered for parole every 3 years after that.

Prisoners sentenced to indefinite imprisonment

Only the Governor can determine the release of prisoners serving indefinite imprisonment. These prisoners are first eligible for parole after the completion of the minimum finite term of their sentence and if not released, will be re-considered for parole every 3 years after that.

Re-socialisation programme

In almost all cases, for a life/ indefinite sentenced prisoner to be released on parole, the prisoner will need to complete a re-socialisation programme.

Re-socialisation programmes are designed to gradually reintegrate life/ indefinite sentenced prisoners into the community to reduce the likelihood of re-offending and improve community safety.

Life and indefinite sentenced prisoners must be assessed for their suitability for the programme 2 years prior to their eligibility for parole.
Approval for these prisoners to participate in the programme is subject to consideration by the Department of Corrective Services, the Prisoners Review Board and the Attorney General with final approval being required from the Governor.

The assessment is based on a range of factors, including: the prisoner’s security rating; completion of recommended treatment programs; general conduct and behaviour in prison; victim issues; their risk of re-offending; and their suitability for release into the community upon completion of the programme. Prisoners are not guaranteed entry into a re-socialisation programme.

A re-socialisation programme generally consists of a number of stages and activities, with the prisoner expected to complete all requirements of each stage before being approved for progress to the next stage. A prisoner can be removed from a re-socialisation programme at any stage if they fail to meet the requirements.

The duration of a re-socialisation programme is tailored to meet the individual prisoner’s risks and needs. Typically, a prisoner on a re-socialisation programme will be placed at a minimum-security facility, undertake supervised and unsupervised external activities and develop their community supports through the Home Leave program.

The prisoner will also generally undertake components of the Prisoner Employment Program that includes seeking employment, work experience, vocational training and/or paid employment.

What the Board considers

The Board must consider the release considerations set out in s 5A of the Act.

Release considerations

The release considerations are as follows:

1) The degree of risk to the community, which includes:
   - the prisoner committing an offence when on parole;
   - the likely nature and seriousness of any such offence; and
   - the personal safety of people in the community or any individual in the community.

2) The circumstances and seriousness of the offence for which the prisoner is in custody.

3) Any remarks by the court that sentenced the prisoner to imprisonment that are relevant to (1) or (2) above.

4) Issues for any victim of the offence for which the prisoner is in custody, if the prisoner is released, including matters in a victim’s submission.

5) The behaviour of the prisoner when in custody to the extent it is relevant to how the prisoner is likely to behave if released.

6) Whether the prisoner has participated in programmes available to them when in custody and if not, the reasons for not doing so.

7) Prisoner’s performance when participating in a programme

8) Behaviour of the prisoner when subject to any release order made previously.

9) The likelihood of the prisoner committing an offence when on parole.

10) The likelihood of the prisoner complying with the standard obligations and any additional requirements of any early release order.

11) Any other consideration that is or may be relevant to whether the prisoner should be released.

What the Board will receive

Depending on what type of sentence of imprisonment you are serving a report and/or parole checklist will be completed and forwarded to the Board before your eligibility date so that they can consider you for parole. The Board also receives a Community Corrections Officer parole report. The Board does not permit legal representation at the hearing of the consideration of parole.

Checklist and Report

If you are a prisoner serving 6 months or more and the court made a parole eligibility order at the time of sentence, you will be assessed for parole on the basis of the Parole checklist and Community Corrections parole report.

- The relevant checklist is completed and received by the Board at least 8 weeks prior to your earliest eligibility date (EED) for release on parole. Any relevant documentation such as your parole plan, treatment reports and letters of support are to be sent with the report.

1 Department of Corrective Services, ‘Adult Custodial Rule 18: Assessment and Sentence Management of Prisoners’, section 13
The checklist/report will include all relevant information for the Board and comments from the Superintendent. The Superintendent’s recommendations will include whether parole should be unsupervised or supervised, any conditions of release and their reasons.

The parole checklist/report will cover the release considerations set out above, as well as any other relevant matters such as extradition issues, deportation issues, an educational/vocational summary, medical/mental health issues, release plans and outstanding court matters.

If you are a prisoner seeking review or re-applying for parole you will have a parole review checklist or parole addendum report completed and forwarded to the Board at least 14 days prior to the prisoner’s review date. Any relevant documentation, as above, will be sent with the report.

If you are a prisoner serving a sentence of life imprisonment or an indefinite term of imprisonment you will have a Parole Review – EXCO (Executive Council) Approval report completed.

- Any relevant reports, such as a psychological report, will also be considered when completing this report.
- This report and any relevant documentation will be forwarded to Sentence Management, who will then forward these with a covering letter to the Board.
- If you are a prisoner on a re-socialisation programme then a re-socialisation programme progress report will also be provided to the Board.
- The Board will forward a report and recommendation to the Minister, who will then advise the Governor, who is the only person with the authority to release on parole, prisoners sentenced to life imprisonment or indefinite imprisonment.

What to include in your application/submission to the Board

As mentioned above the Board will receive a checklist/report, which will be completed with you. You can also submit any additional relevant documents such as your parole plan, treatment reports and letters of support.

The additional documents should include the following information.

1. Background
   - What led to your imprisonment?
   - Family, friends, spouse.
   - Past education and work history.
   - Any past drug or alcohol problems.
   - Health and recreational activities.

2. Prisoner’s attitudes
   - How you feel about the offending behaviour:
     - how you think it affected the victims;
     - how have you tried to assess the behaviour and make changes;
     - how your past contributed to the offending behaviour; and
     - how you will change that when you leave prison.
   - Your time in prison:
     - offences that may have occurred;
     - your activities, including recreational, educational and work; and
• interactions with others in the prison.

3. Future plans
   • Immediate and long term goals.
   • How you will deal with your past and future problems?
   • What are your main concerns?
   • Future employment opportunities;
   • Future accommodation;
   • Future education; and
   • Plans to continue with treatment programs.

4. References
   • Ensure that all future plans are supported with references – such as a letter from your prospective employer or a letter confirming accommodation.

The Board’s decision

The Board must give a prisoner written notice of any decision made about them as soon as possible after the decision is made (s 107B), however, under s 114 of the Act, the Board may withhold the reasons for a decision if it is in the public interest to do so.

Under section 115 of the Act the rules of natural justice (procedural fairness), do not apply to certain actions by the Governor, the Minister, the Board, an authorised person, or the CEO. This applies to s 115A, which includes when the Board may review decisions about release.

If you are denied parole

Getting an adverse decision

If you have received an adverse decision about being released on parole you can request a review under section 115A of the Act, or you can re-apply.

Seeking a review

The request for a review must be on the grounds that the person who made the decision either (section 115A(6)):

- did not comply with the Act or regulations;
- made an error of law; or
- used incorrect or irrelevant information or was not provided with relevant information.

The request must (section 115A(7)):

- be in writing;
- state the reasons for it; and
- include any submissions that the applicant wants to make to the Board about the decision concerned and the reasons for it.

Once this request is made the chairperson of the Board must consider it and review the decision and may:

- confirm, amend or cancel the decision;
• make another decision; or
• refer the decision to the Board for further consideration.

The 'review' however is not a reviewable decision as provided for in s 115A(4) of the Act, so a prisoner is limited to only one review.

Re-applying for parole

Once you have reached the date of eligibility for parole, you may apply for release on parole at any time and as many times as you like during your sentence but you must be able to show a change in your circumstances from those that were present at the time that parole was denied, cancelled or suspended.

For example, if outstanding treatment needs were a factor for you not being approved parole, you must be able to show that you have participated in or completed relevant treatment programmes and can show positive outcomes from those programmes.

If you are denied parole or have had your parole cancelled there is no obligation for the Board to reconsider you for parole again, it will usually only be considered by a prisoner-initiated application. This does not apply to prisoners serving life imprisonment or indefinite imprisonment where there are set times for review set out in the legislation, as noted above.

What happens if you receive parole?

If you are approved for parole, a parole order will be made stating the date that parole starts and ends, whether it is supervised or unsupervised and the obligations of the parole order.

You will have to acknowledge in writing that you understand and will comply with the standard obligations of the parole order, and any additional requirements if applicable. These obligations/requirements are to ensure that you can integrate back into the community and require you to have regular contact with a community corrections officer ('CCO').

Standard obligations (s 29 of the Act)

The standard obligations include:

• Reporting to a community corrections centre within 72 hours after being released, or as directed by a CCO;
• Notifying a CCO of any change of address or place of employment within 2 clear working days after the change;
• Complying with the lawful orders or directions of any CCO;
• If under a community corrections order, doing community work and/or community corrections activities as the manager of a centre determines and directs and doing that work to the satisfaction of the person supervising the work;
• If under a pre-sentence order or a community corrections order and the person on parole is:
  o at a centre;
  o doing community work;
  o doing community corrections activities; or o performing any requirement of a programme, they must follow specific rules set out in s 76(4) of the Act;
• Any other obligations on the offender under s 76 of the Act.
Additional requirements (s 30 of the Act)

The additional requirements can include:

- where the prisoner must reside;
- anything to prevent a victim of the offence from coming into contact with the prisoner;
- the prisoner must wear a device for monitoring purposes;
- the prisoner must allow the installation of any device or equipment at the place where the prisoner resides for monitoring purposes;
- if the CEO of community corrections so directs, the prisoner must:
  - wear a device for monitoring purposes;
  - permit the installation of any device or equipment at the place where the prisoner resides for monitoring purposes;
- the prisoner must not leave Western Australia except with and in accordance with the written permission of the CEO;
- anything to facilitate the prisoner’s rehabilitation;
- the prisoner must, in each period of 7 days, do the prescribed number of hours of community corrections activities;
- the prisoner must:
  - seek or engage in gainful employment or in vocational training; or
  - engage in gratuitous work for an organisation approved by the CEO;
- any other requirements.

The following is an example of a parole order:

A prisoner is released on parole for a six month period of supervision subject to the standard obligations under section 29 of the Sentence Administration Act 2003 with the following additional requirements:

- attend substance abuse counselling;
- provide random urinalysis for all illicit drugs; and
- not to drive whilst legally disentitled to do so.

What happens if you breach parole?

If any conditions or requirements of parole are breached during the supervision period then it is likely that your parole will be suspended or cancelled and you will be arrested and returned to prison.

Examples of breaches include:

- Being charged with new offences
- Testing positive to drugs or alcohol
- Possessing drugs or alcohol
- Admitting to using drugs or alcohol
- Being in a place from which you have been prohibited while on parole
- Failing to report for supervision
- Failing to attend urinalysis
- Disorderly conduct
- Failing to attend treatment programmes or counselling
The outcome of your parole being cancelled or suspended will also affect you negatively in any future application for parole, as conduct when on parole is a release consideration.

Suspension of parole
If your parole is suspended you become liable to resume serving the rest of your sentence and you will remain in prison to complete your sentence unless you successfully apply to have the suspension lifted.

Cancellation of parole
If your parole is cancelled you become liable to resume serving the rest of your sentence and you will remain in prison to complete your sentence unless you successfully apply for another parole order in relation to that sentence at a later point in time.

Automatic cancellation of parole if imprisoned for new offence committed while on parole
If you are on parole and you commit an offence for which you are imprisoned then your parole will automatically be cancelled and you have to serve the new sentence and your old sentence. This rule applies even if you have finished your parole by the time you come up in court for sentencing.

How much of the old sentence you have to serve depends on how long you were on parole before the new offence occurred because you get credit on your old sentence for “clean street time” which is the period between your release and when the new offence was committed.

How to ensure you do not breach parole
When a parole order is made in your favour it is essential that you understand all the conditions that you must follow including the standard requirements and any additional requirements.

It is important to understand that once any of the conditions are breached, you may not be given a second chance, as one breach is enough to have your parole cancelled or suspended.

Programmes
Participation and completion of relevant programmes in prison is a key part of a prisoner’s rehabilitation and greatly affects your chances of being released on parole.

You will be assessed during case management for the appropriate programmes for your individual needs and will be placed into the programme/s when they are first available for you. Your case officer is the best contact for information on the availability and schedule of relevant programmes.

In regards to parole, you will need to participate and/or complete and show sufficient gains in the treatment programmes applicable to you. Programmes can range from general offending programmes to specific programmes relevant to the offending the subject of your conviction, including violent offending, sexual offending and substance abuse.

How Legal Aid WA can assist with parole issues
Legal Aid WA can provide general information on parole issues. If you would like to speak to Legal Aid you should put your name down to see Legal Aid in the prison on a prison visit or if you are in a regional area, contact the nearest office of Legal Aid. Contact details are at the end of this kit.

The Sentence Administration Act 2003 (WA) applies to the following charts unless otherwise stated.
CHART – Prisoners serving 6 months or more with parole eligibility order

Before the day that the prisoner is eligible for release on parole THE BOARD MUST CONSIDER if they should be released – s 20(1)

The decision is based on:
- the release considerations – s 20(2)(a),
- any report made by the CEO under s 17 – s 20(2)(b), and
- any other information about the prisoner brought to their attention – s 20(2)(c)

HAS THE PRISONER REACHED THEIR EARLIEST ELIGIBILITY DATE (EED) FOR PAROLE?

YES
Prisoner may be released

If the Board decides to release the prisoner it makes a parole order

The parole period starts on the date that the prisoner is released and ends when the parole term ends – s 20(4)

NO
The prisoner cannot be released on parole – s 20(3)

If the Board decides not to release the prisoner, it may subsequently reconsider whether the prisoner should be released on parole – s 20(5)

A prisoner may apply for a review of the decision under s 115A:
- restricted to one review,
- basis for review - Board:
  ▪ did not comply with the Act or regulations;
  ▪ made an error of law; or
  ▪ used incorrect or irrelevant information or was not provided with relevant information.

Also a prisoner may re-apply for parole if can show a change in circumstances.
Life imprisonment
Only the Governor may grant parole - s 25

For an offence other than murder s 25(1a)
- A parole order may be made if:
  - the prisoner has served the period required by s 96(1) of the Sentencing Act 1995 (WA); and
  - a report has been given to the Minister under ss 12 or 12A

IF PAROLED:
- A release date is set by the Governor – s 25(2)
- A parole order must be for at least 6 months and not more than 5 years – s 25(3)

For an offence of murder s 25(1)
- Parole order may be made if:
  - a minimum term has been set
  - the minimum term has been served
  - a report by the Board has been given to the Minister under ss 12 or 12A

IF NOT PAROLED:
May apply for a review of the decision under section 115A BUT restricted to one review AND/OR can re-apply if can show a change in circumstances

How to find legislation

The State Law Publisher (SLP) is the official publisher of Western Australian legislation and statutory information. SLP maintains a website (www.slp.wa.gov.au) that stores current copies of all legislation.

To find a copy of a piece of legislation referred to in this kit you can either telephone the SLP on (08) 6552 6000, attend their office in person (Ground Floor, 10 William Street, Perth) or go to their website. If you go to their office to access legislation they may charge you a fee. If you access the legislation via their website there is no cost.

If you are accessing legislation via the SLP website (www.slp.wa.gov.au) click on the Click HERE for Western Australian Legislation Database button. This will then take you to a page allowing you to select Acts or Subsidiary legislation. If you are looking for an Act, for example the Criminal Code click on the in force link. Then select the alpha letter of the name of the Act, for example C for Criminal Code and navigate to the heading of your Act. If you click on this link you can select to view the Act in PDF, Word or HTML. If you are looking for a piece of subsidiary legislation, for example the Criminal Procedure Rules 2005 (WA) you click on the in force link under the heading Subsidiary legislation.
